Go (north) west: how tourism is faring in Donegal, Mayo and Sligo

The first of a three-part series in which we speak to tourist businesses around Ireland

Wed, Sep 28, 2016, 05:00 Updated: Fri, Sep 30, 2016, 10:58

Business owners in the west of Ireland credit the Wild Atlantic Way, Westport's Greenway and the reduced 9 per cent VAT for tourism and hospitality services for boosting tourism in recent years. Video: Mark Paul

- f The tourism industry is hopping, visitor numbers are up 13 per cent and their spending is up by a tenth: almost €2 billion from January to June. It is Ireland's second-biggest export and it employs nearly 250,000 workers. Tourism appears in rude health.
- t Ahead of next month's Budget and the debate over retaining the 9 per cent special tourism VAT rate brought in to stimulate the sector in 2011, The Irish Times took a trip around Ireland.
- in
- ...

I spoke to scores of tourism business owners, steering clear of the "golden triangle" of Dublin, Galway and West Cork/Kerry. In a series of articles, videos and podcasts, beginning today and ending Friday, we take the up-to-date temperature of the Irish tourism
